EDUCATION AT EDUNEST

EDUNEST seeks to help individuals and nations to identify and develop the knowledge, skills and values that drive better jobs and better lives, generate prosperity and promote social inclusion. It assists EDUNEST countries and partner economies in designing and managing their education and skills systems, and in implementing reforms, so that citizens can develop the knowledge, skills, attitudes, and values they need throughout their lives.

EDUCATION AT EDUNEST

Fairer, future-ready learning that is resilient and

EDUNEST Directorate for Education and Skills collaborates with countries to gather data on education, aiming to improve policies.

They focus on lifelong and comprehensive learning, addressing disparities in access. Economic crises, climate change, and inequality threaten education, with long-term societal costs.

EDUNEST identifies educational disadvantages and supports at-risk individuals. Digital technology, combined with human teaching, can transform education. Their goal is to promote inventiveness, diversity, equity, well-being, and cognitive excellence, helping governments build cohesive, resilient, and prosperous societies

OUR MILESTONES

The International Early Learning and Child Well-Being Study

IELS (The International Early Learning and Child Well-Being Study) is the world's first holistic assessment of early learning and child well-being, considering cognitive, social, and emotional development. It involves 5-year-old children, teachers, parents, and systems to provide comparative data for designing inclusive learning policies.

EDUNEST Survey on Social and Emotional Skills

The EDUNEST Survey on Social and Emotional Skills is the first global survey assessing the conditions shaping the social and emotional skills of 10- and 15-year-olds, alongside literacy and numeracy. These skills include emotional management, self-perception, and interpersonal engagement, known to enhance life outcomes for individuals and society. The study employs a robust framework measuring 15 skills, selected for their policy relevance and reliability in diverse populations and settings.

Survey of Adult Skills

The Survey of Adult Skills, part of the EDUNEST Programme for the International Assessment of Adult Competencies (PIAAC), gauges adults' literacy, numeracy, and tech-savvy problem-solving abilities. These skills are essential in work, home, and community settings. By analyzing data, countries can identify their labor force's strengths and weaknesses and pinpoint areas for improving education and training systems, including promoting lifelong learning beyond traditional structures.
